... CONTINUING THE TRADITION OF EXCELLENCE

We have long-established ourselves among our peers as a dedicated student body, a role which we have assumed with pride. Our commitment to excellence was proven in all fields — academic, athletic, artistic and vocational. Being a Falcon includes the continuation of time-honored traditions; and in all that we undertook, whether in class, out of class or with class, we are proud to say that with tradition, we did it!

... LIKE NO ONE BEFORE US

While the tried and true traditions were an essential part of our year, we added our own touches and set new standards for others to follow. Never before has there been such a deep pride among us. Never before has such spirit overwhelmed us, and never before has there been such unity among classes as we worked to make our experiences the best. The year was special, magical somehow; and all because in our unique style, we did it!

... BEYOND BOOKS AND CLASSES

High school ... it's not just a building, or textbooks and tests; it's a way of life, and what a life it was this year! We decked the halls and decked out for any occasion. We dressed out and dressed up and we could have danced all night. We wore Hallowe'en masks and face masks; and rain or shine, sleet or snow, even hurricanes couldn't stop us. We won and lost; we took it on the chin a few times; but through it all we cheered. Life was a beach; all the world was our stage, and we capped it off in caps and gowns ... in our own inimitable way, we did it!

Graduation is indeed an overwhelming sight, illustrated so well in this bird's-eye view.

Cox had two valedictorians and three saluditorians in the Class of '85. Tom Smith, one of the valedictorians, gives his address.

Graduates Leann Cyphers and Lisa DuBicki illustrate the lighter side of commencement.

Is It the End . . .

Or Just the Beginning?

It is the end, the end of twelve long years of hard work and dedication. It is the end of cramped and crowded locker areas . . . the end of in-school suspension and hall passes . . . the end of 6½-hour school days and green parking slips. It is the end of high school football games and dances . . . the end of Homecoming floats and spirit week . . . the end of powder-puff football games and championship wrestling matches. It is the end of what has often been termed as "the best years of your life." It is graduation.

Graduation is very symbolic in that it is an end, yet also serves as a beginning. Although it is looked forward to, it is sometimes also dreaded. "It scares me that I'm not quite sure where graduation will take me," reveals senior Andrina Tavenner. "Up until now it has been 'Mom and Dad's choice,' and now it's mine. Now I'm the one who is responsible." Kelly Wilson, another senior, is worried in another way, saying, "I'm afraid I'll lose contact with my friends. Everyone is going to be scattered apart, and it'll be difficult to stay in touch. I don't want that." However, to some, graduation will come as a relief, as reflected in this comment made by senior Bobby Brown, "I just can't wait to get out!"

However intimidating graduation may seem, though, the beginning it represents must be kept in mind. Many of the graduates will be attending colleges; others will be going directly into their occupations. Whatever the choice, graduation is the beginning of what you want your life to be.

"Up until now it has been 'Mom and Dad's choice,' and now it's mine. Now I'm the one who is responsible."

Life's a Beach

Waves Otay, Surf All Day

With the advent of spring, student's thoughts turn towards the beach. Favorite stomping and surfing grounds were the well-established 83rd and 1st Street territories, where on any given sunny day you would find people surfing, watching others surfing, talking, or simply basking in the sun. Many of the locals enjoy mocking the tourists who invade the beaches every summer. When asked his opinion of the tourists, Steve McNaughton replied, "I think it is amusing to give incorrect directions to tourists."

Although the summer was mostly one of relaxation, there was controversy over whether or not 4x4 trucks were allowed to drive on the strip. Despite the united protest by the truckers, the ban was not lifted.

The summer's activities peaked in the final two days of vacation with the East Coast Surfing Championship. This is an annual competition, the longest and most prestigious of its kind. E.C.S.C. meant something different to all who attended. Senior Michele Criscione said, "E.C.S.C. was like a smorgasboard of guys!"

All Hallows' Eve and . . . Things That Go Bump In The Night

It was a storybook Halloween: a dark and rainy night with enough chill to tingle anyone's spine. Though dismal to a few trick-or-treaters, some spirits soared on All Hallows' Eve.

A clown or two raised sinking spirits, and heroes saved the night from witches and other ghouls lurking in the shadows.

Molly Whelahan, a junior, commented, "Halloween's my favorite holiday because it's the one time all year long when you can be whoever or whatever you want to be." Another trick-or-treater was overhead to say, "It's fun . . . the pumpkins, the costumes. I still get excited and I'm seventeen!"

The spirit shown by Halloween revelers was summed up by sophomore Nancy Moore, "It's like mailmen — 'neither rain nor snow nor dark of night' could

High-visibility Spirit

"As Far As You Can See"

Undoubtedly the high point of the fall sports season is Homecoming week. There was green and gold "as far as you could see" and nearly everyone was swept up in the tide of spirit that rolled through the halls in late October.

College Day was the opening kickoff of spirit week with high school students sporting the names, logos, and colors of their favorite schools on sweatshirts, shirts, hats, warm-ups, and buttons. The winner for College Day was Missy Touragee, decked in the blue and gold of the University of Michigan.

The Twenties roared in on Tuesday with Gangster/Flapper Day.

While most students were dressed in pin-stripes and "swingin' fringe," seniors Chris Schellhammer and Ron Copeland took a different approach to the word "flapper" and dressed up in falcon wings and beaks. Their originality did not win them first place, however, which did go to Phil Grant and Deedra Jenkins.

On Wednesday, Santa Claus rubbed elbows with Buckwheat and Madonna, while Agnes of God and Mother Theresa chatted with Mickey and Minnie Mouse. It wasn't an early Halloween though; it was Hero Day, and Surena Fazeli-Martin took first place as the peace-loving Ghandi of India.

The clock was turned back on Thursday as the school became a day care center. Many of the more daring students came to school with teddy bears, pacifiers, and animal slippers. It was Little Kids Day, a day that means wearing the latest in footy pajamas to class. Senior Kelly Wilson stole first with a freckled smile.

As tradition dictates, Spirit Week came to a climax with Green and Gold Day, when every loyal Falcon wears green and gold.

While most people simply wore clothing in our colors, a dedicated group of students even went so far as to paint their hair and faces green and gold. Catherine Esau, a junior, outdid the rest, however, and won first place Friday.

According to many, Spirit Week '85-'86 was the best ever. Sophomore Amy Spencer noted, "The students showed so much enthusiasm and originality." Senior Anne Rammel said, "This was the best spirit week I have seen since I've been here!"

13 To 7!

A Homecoming Extravaganza!

It was October 21st, otherwise known as College Day, and it was the beginning of one of the most spectacular weeks in Falcon history. It was the beginning of the 1985-86 Homecoming Extravaganza!

Homecoming kicked-off with what became a five-day costume party, previously referred to as Spirit Week. Hundreds of Falcons dressed up to show their spirit.

Next came the famous 1985 Homecoming pep rally. "It was the best pep rally Cox High has seen since my coming here in 1979," exclaimed a proud Principal Lottie Waters after the event. The Falcons blew the roof off the gym during the class cheering competition, ultimately won by the seniors. There were other class competitions, too, like the banner contest (won by the sophomores), spirit links (won by the seniors), and relay races (won by the juniors). Most importantly, however the pep rally got not just the football players psyched, but the rest of the school, too.

As a direct result of the undeniable enthusiasm of the Cox fans, the Falcons witnessed the most exciting football game in recent history. At halftime, the score was 13 to 7,

FALCONS. Rachel Atkinson was crowned Homecoming Queen for 1985, and the French Club won first place in the float competition (Latin club came in second, Senior Class in third). Then the heated play was resumed.

"After the pep rally, everyone was psyched," replied senior quarterback Tim Brunick. "It really made a difference in the way we played." The final result: COX OVER KELLAM, 13 to 7!

Juniors Get Their Rings

Dear Diary,

You wouldn't believe the incredible time I had at Ring Dance last night. I felt like Cinderella as I stepped into the limousine; my date and I looked so elegant. He bought me a wrist corsage of pink roses that matched my satin hoop dress perfectly.

Six of us went on a triple date, first for a candlelight dinner at the Lighthouse and then to the dance at the Hilton.

The mood was festive, and the D.J. played the best songs from "Missing You" to "Rock Lobster".

"It was the highlight of my junior year!"

— Paul Robertson
Class of '86

I was really nervous when my date and I had to walk across the bridge and receive our rings. And, Diary, he kissed me in front of everyone! I was so embarrassed!

We left a little early and went to some hotel parties to celebrate the arrival of our rings, and then we began the goal of turning them — 86 turns! We capped off the evening with a long walk on the beach and breakfast at Poppies.

It all seems so unreal today, but I have my new class ring, a sign of twelve years of hard work, to prove that it was more than a sweet dream.

A beach landscape and multicolored ballrooms brighten Ring Dance's atmosphere.

Hurricane Watch In The Eye Of Gloria

Above: Hurricane Gloria took 400 feet of the 15th street pier with her as she passed through.

Upon waking on Thursday, September 26th, perhaps you rose to Laura Branigan's tune "Gloria" being belted out on several radio stations. On the way to school and in the halls hopeful whispers of "Hey, maybe we'll get out early because of Gloria" were everywhere.

Who or what was Gloria? Why was she causing all the commotion? Gloria happened to be Virginia Beach's worst hurricane threat in years. She was on her way and Beach residents were getting ready for her. Windows were taped and pantries were stocked. The lines at Farm Fresh and Belo were phenomenal.

Parents feared her, but little children delighted in the hustle and bustle atmosphere she generated. While parents were crossing their fingers in hopes Gloria would pass quietly, students were crossing their fingers in hopes of missing a day of school. The next day of school was indeed cancelled, and students and teachers were treated to a 3-day weekend.

The irony of the matter was that after all the hype and frightening weather reports, Gloria did little damage in general. In fact, the next day turned out to be a sunny and blue-skied one! Who can figure this beach weather?

Beachfest!

Neptune Festival Makes Two Splashes

The Neptune Festival, beginning September 13th with preliminary events, was broken into two parts due to the much talked about hurricane "Gloria." Though the extremely inclement weather put a damper on several events, it did not deter students from participating in the festival through various school organizations.

Concession stands lined the boardwalk and cries of "Coke! Coffee! Popcorn!" filled the air. The Key Club booth, sponsored by a local Kiwanis chapter, was manned by students from this school and others.

"I liked being able to help out and meet a few new people," commented Shelli Hunter, a recruited concession salesperson.

The SCA had a food and souvenir booth on the boardwalk and a concession stand at the Oceana Naval Air Show. Although it rained during the air show, the workers remained undaunted by the weather. A few students even ventured into the downpour and acted as walking and talking advertisements for their food.

"It was a miserable day, the business was rotten, and the air show was cancelled . . .

but, hey, everyone who worked at the booth had a blast!" commented Wendell Cosenza.

The week held several events in store, namely the sandcastle contest, the surfing contest, and the great parade of King Neptune and his princesses, one of whom was our own Susan Wood, a senior. So, as one can see, though the Neptune Festival got off to a shaky start, in the end, most would agree it was a success.

Curtain Time!

The Show Must Go On!

The lights went on, and the curtains parted. The scenery had an eerie aura which set the stage for Tennessee Williams' play Dark of the Moon. The Thespians, under guidance of Mr. James Garrett and Mr. Bill Boyle presented the play in late November to eager crowds.

Featuring Pat

Dooley as John, and Cheryl Rector as Barbara Allen, the play was a story of forbidden love. John was a witch boy who fell in love with Barbara Allen; he must become human to marry her, but he can only stay a human if Barbara Allen remains faithful to him for a year. There were twists and turns in the plot. Barbara Allen was assaulted, thus breaking her oath to be faithful. She later died and John, according to the arrangement, turned back into a witch.

The play proved a success. Due to a classic Williams play, portrayed in fine fashion by the actors, and eye catching scenery, the theatre was almost completely filled.

"This is the first production the new school has produced which made a profit," commented student director Allison Bloxsom.

The Girls Get Tough

The big game . . . it was finally time. Junior and senior girls alike awaited this chance to take part in the annual Powder Puff Football game. "I couldn't wait to get onto the field to play," commented Kathy Crowder. Each team had the chance to strut its stuff on the field; they showed the guys how football should really be played.

Practices were held during one of the coldest weeks of the season, but the thermometer rose to a toasty 50 degrees on the night of the game. Both teams were psyched and ready to play; the spirit was incredible. Banners covered the fence on the seniors' side while the juniors displayed confidence by wearing t-shirts threatening "Seniors die in '85".

Hoping for a quick game, the seniors scored a touchdown less than five minutes into the game.

The juniors, in retaliation, soon scored a touchdown of their own. It was back and forth, and the crowd grew tense near the end of the fourth quarter. The seniors led, and the juniors had the ball; but, alas, the seniors came out the victors.

"Our awesome coaches, hard training and conditioning paid off! Tradition has it; Seniors dominate!" exclaimed Julie Moore, an obviously excited senior team member.

'Tis the Season

Falcons Deck the Halls

Dear Santa,

I've honestly, honestly tried to be good this year. It just does not seem to be my year though. I mean, I appologize for screaming at my new baby brother, (He cries too much! Have you ever had to deal with a newborn baby while trying to write an essay for Mr. Lambriola's class?)

I'm also sorry about the time I "borrowed" Mom and Dad's car and totalled it. Well . . . I really wasn't in control of my faculties. What do I mean my faculties? Well . . . I mean I was sleepwalking! Well it might have had something to do with the party I had while my parents were out of town. Maybe we were a little loud and rowdy, but at least we made the police work for their pay.

So, you can see I'm just an average teenager and therefore I only want the things an average teenager wants. Let me start with the small things and lead up to the larger ones.

1 — A small check for say a few thousand or so . . .

2 — A complete high-tech stereo system.

3 — A 1986 candy apple red Porsche 944 Turbo!

Ok, Santa, doesn't trying count for anything? By the way, if we happen to have any leftover Christmas cookies, I'll try to remember to leave you some. Otherwise, you and Blitzen can share a carrot.

Merry Christmas!

Putting bells on her shoes, Amy Wilkins rings in the Christmas season.

Live!

Falcons Rock

As long as there are musicians, coliseums, and music, there will be concerts. Hampton Roads was lucky to host some of the year's best shows, such as Phil Collins, Amy Grant, Tina Turner, Sting, and the Romantics.

"Amy Grant was great! She really got the audience to come to life!" commented senior Diana vanValkenburgh.

When the Falcons were not at the big name concerts, they could be seen taking in the sounds of local talent. Some Falcons even formed bands of their own. Alan Hayth, a sophomore, was the drummer for the band Native English, which performed at the Homecoming dance. "They're awesome! Native English has just the right

Undoubtedly the concert of the year, Live Aid featured over one hundred of the most popular groups and artists of our time. Audience and performers joined forces to raise money to aid the starving Ethiopians.

Live Aid was a first in music history, surpassing even Woodstock in magnitude. Bob Geldof of the Boomtown Rats conjured up the idea and organized the whole affair. Many were rooting for him to win the Nobel Peace Prize.

The big groups kept appearing on the local concert scene. So the beat went on for the Falcons.

Day In, Day Out, Day Off

Falcons at Work and at Play

Where did students go after school? This question was asked by many, especially teachers.

Perhaps the student had a part time job. Many students worked at different places from the beach front to Lynnhaven Mall. Although our students are active in after school activities, many still hold part time jobs along with their busy schedules. Senior April Sabourin says, "Working part time gives you experience, money, and sometimes a trade; but most of all it gives you long lasting friends."

Also, many Falcons find that relaxing or "hanging out" was the thing to do. Students could be found at places like the Jewish Mother, the Corner Market, or Lynnhaven Mall. Lynnhaven Mall was a favorite because one can shop in the variety of stores or catch a movie at one of the twelve theaters.

I Hate It . . .

When That Happens!

Introducing Mr. & Miss Haps. Now every once in a while something will happen to prompt you to say, "I hate it when that happens." Example: You started your school day off by tripping on the stairs. Then you went to your locker to get your books for 1st bell, but you couldn't open it. When you finally got it open, you found the locker so full that everything fell out into the hall.

Then you looked like both a fool and a slob. Well, you finally made it to class. Nothing major happened so you figured that the day would not be quite as terrible as you first thought. Not so. On the way to 2nd bell, you dropped your books in the middle of a crowded hall; and they were scattered. Good grief!

In 3rd bell, you wrote an essay that had to be done by the end of the bell. Your pen exploded and went all over your clothes and the paper (which you had just completed writing). You went to the bathroom after class and found out that there was no soap to clean off the ink. Finally, that there is no soap to clean off the ink. Finally, lunch! You were starved and planned on having a large lunch. You got to the lunchroom and reached for your wallet to pay when, suddenly, you knew what was about to happen. You looked in your wallet and found only a total of four cents.

By now, you realized that this was not one of your better days, and it wasn't likely to get better.

"Things can only get better."
— Howard Jones
"Dream Into Action"

After reaching Mr. Leagan's class, you noticed a huge run down the side of your stockings. What luck! After calling the roll, Mr. Leagan asked to speak to you out in the hall about your numerous tardies. (This was not the first rotten day you had had.)

After school, you heaved a sigh of relief. Then, you thought to yourself, nothing more could go wrong. WRONG!

You were loaded down with books from almost every class and when you finally got out to the bus area, you could see only the tail lights of the last bus, leaving you behind.

As Howard Jones sang, "Things can only get better." Right?

Cox Students At Their Best

Are looks really everything? According to comedian Billy Crystal, "After all, it is better to look good than to feel good. And dahlings, you look mahvelous!" Year after year, it seemed that the yearbook tended to capture the students only at their best, but a school full of attractive, well-dressed people would be a dull place indeed. As we all know, it is impossible to be stunning all of the time.

THE GREAT ESCAPE

Falcons Fly the Coop

Ah . . . vacations! We all live for those golden days away from the routine and drudgery of homework, tests, and class lectures. After enduring the mid-winter blahs, one often notices that certain traits of stir craziness begin to appear. You know it is definitely vacation time when:

1. You look like "Poppin-Fresh" in a bathing suit.
2. Your summer tan turns olive drab.
3. Leagan's current events lecture is the topic of lunchtime conversation.
4. Reading the Canterbury Tales seems appealing.
5. You've walked into second bell for the third time that day.
6. You shut your locker and have to open it

7. again because you forgot your books.
8. You open your locker for no reason but to gaze at the pictures pasted on the inside.
9. You imagine bars on your English classroom windows.
10. You start laughing at Mr. Trammell's jokes.
11. The percent error on your chemistry lab is 220.
12. You welcome the sight of your bus rounding the corner.
13. You pay close attention to the morning announcements and actually observe the moment of silence.

A Class Act . . .

Falcons Strut Their Stuff

From Riding on the Metro to the Emerald Isle, the auditorium came to life as we hosted the annual Miss Cox Pageant and the Spring Fashion Show in March.

The latest spring styles were sponsored by Mrs. Susan May's Advanced Fashion Merchandising students. The fifteen seniors were responsible for all aspects of the show from planning and publicity to lighting and choreography. The show was planned around rock music and original set design. The garments were provided by local retailers. "Everyone came through with flying colors. There was a lot of pressure on the models," said Mrs. May. "They worked so hard it was amazing to me."

The Key Club sponsored the third annual Miss Cox pageant. The co-chairmen Susan McClellan and Sarah Ashton, along with the club members co-ordinated the event which encompassed personality, evening gown, and talent competitions. The twelve contestants displayed an array of talent ranging from piano performance, modern dance and singing to an Irish jig and a violin performance. The winner was Amy Riddick, first runner-up was Nell-Garwood MacEachern, and third runner-up was Andrea Akers. Contestant Sarah Hess reflected, "I had fun . . . it was a chance to learn and I met some new friends."

"Everyone came through with flying colors."

... AND WE WERE A BREED APART

We were distinct. We exuded a certain confidence. Sure we had classes and games like other high schools, but we added our own flair that branded us as being uniquely Falcons. We were everywhere ... at the mall, the parties, the beach. When we had gone, we had left our indelible mark. We dared to differ. We dared to excel. We dared to take the lead. We were the Falcons.

LEADERSHIP

Five Meanings to the Word

The 1985-86 Senior Class officers made major contributions to their class. With the ongoing leadership of Tim Brunick and the expertise of fellow officers Matt Hayden, Ron Copeland, Kim Dustin, and Woody Ballew, the Senior Class once again came out on top, outclassing their Freshman, Sophomore and Junior counterparts.

These five innovative and hard working officers sponsored the annual talent show, a big success once again. They were also responsible for our unique mascot: The Moose. Their combined efforts helped make the Class of

'86 the best Senior Class that Cox has ever seen.

When asked to expand on the details, Vice President Matt Hayden upheld the true characteristics of a true leader: "No comment," he said. However, secretary Woody Ballew was more open to discussion. "We've worked hard to make the Senior Class the best, and I think we have succeeded!" she said.

With great pride, the officers can say that they took part in the shaping of one of the best groups of seniors to come through Cox. 1985-86 is a senior year not to be forgotten.

Varieties In Style

If you are looking for Madonna "Wanna-Be's" then you will probably be disappointed. The girls to watch in the halls of Cox High are the seniors. What do they wear? Today it is a paisley shirt with a rhinestone brooch at the collar and a pair of stirrup pants from the local mall. Tomorrow it may be a three-quarter length skirt or the next day of pair of well-worn jeans. In any event, she'll look fine, comfortable and definitely in style. Says Amy Briggs, "I feel I can wear anything and not worry about having someone judge me." Don Johnson has become serious competition, because the senior guys have perfected "casual as an art." It's not just the T-shirt from the local surf shop, the Levi's 501 jeans and the SWATCH. It's rarely wearing socks (unless Artic conditions prevail) and knowing how to carry it off. "I don't have some of the pressures because I can wear what I want," remarks Surena Fazeli-Matin. "I don't worry about looking sloppy once in awhile."

Senior Fashion is individual, and, for the Class of '86, it's beyond following style trends; it's a way of life.

In his casual sweater and Levi's, Bill Domanski showed the "laid back" look, senior style.

The horrible effects of senioritis were felt by Ron Copeland as he was overcome by muscle spasms.

Senioritis

Is There A Cure?

SYMPTOMS — Acute boredom, indifference to homework, listless responses in class, slipping grades, chronic late arrivals. (Each case exhibits different symptoms)

DIAGNOSIS — Senioritis

CASE HISTORY #1 — "I haven't been on time since I forgot to set my clock back," reported Diana Van Valkenburgh

CASE HISTORY #2 — Bob Buffington observed, "destruction of numerous brain cells, causing severe memory lapses."

CASE HISTORY #3 — "If it's no fun, I don't want to do it," said Jackie Stanfield.

CURE — One or more of the following to be taken in June, 1986: Cap and gown, gold tassel, baccalaureate, diploma in hand.

RECOVERY RATE — 100% if the preceding prescription is taken as ordered.

Carrie Cubine
David Culver

FLUMMERY

A New Language?

"Hey girl, how's it going?" asked Carme Kiley.

"Pretty cool. What's up?" replied Deedra Jenkins.

"Not much, except I had the most awesome weekend. It was so radical!" answered Carme.

Students each year definitely have their own unique language such words as "killer" (not pertaining to mass murder) and "man" were present in almost every conversation. Where do the expressions come from? That's difficult to answer. It seems that one student made up a phrase and everyone else caught on. To further understand those catch phrases, one must use a special dictionary:

BUD — n. Any person (no relation to the alcoholic beverage)

MAN — n. A general term pertaining to both sexes.

COOL — adj. Rarely referring to the temperature, but a mode of describing the supremacy of a situation.

KILLER — adj. Not in reference to a murder, but an expression of how "cool" something is.

RADICAL — adj. Considered an apt slang expression for something "cool."

LAME — adj. Word expressing the utter futility or overall drabness of a situation.

While Sheila Higgins and Rachel Atkinson discuss juicy gossip, Jackie Stanfield listens intently.

Best Friends Carme Kiley and Deedra Jenkins were always found "laughing it up" during the year.

SECURITY

An Eternal Bond

Laurel had Hardy, Chip had Dale, and Amos had Andy. Everyone has at least one best friend, and if you're lucky, you might have two or three.

Your best friend sees you at your worst, and when you may feel your very best, and on those days when you need that anchor of support, who gives it freely? Naturally, your best friend! And who's always at the ready with something to make you laugh, even at yourself? Your best friend of course!

"It's nice to know there is always someone there for me," said Ann Steenburgh. Stephanie Rohdenburg has a true definition of her own: "Your best friend will always be there, standing by your side."

It's comforting to know that your friend knows everything about you and still likes you!

Kimberly Hood — Be your own hero.
Ed Hopper — Skiing is number one. Good luck and God bless.

Christine House — In the past, I was confined, but the future holds no limits.

Karen Howard

Pete Howard — Put off today what you can do tomorrow in study hall.

Stephen Howe — Life's not a beach.

Jennifer Howsare

My Jolie Hutchings

Eric Ingvaldsen

Christoph Jacobi — If you aren't German, you're not smart.

Ulrike Jacobi
Nicole James
Mike Jarrett

Catherine A. Tarvis

SPARETIME

How's It Spent?

What do the seniors do when they have a little extra time? Grades show that they surely don't spend all their time doing homework! Something must be taking up the time not spent in school. Recent studies have shown that soap operas have become a top priority on most of the girls' lists, and sadly enough, some gentlemen seem to have a slight leaning toward this type of recreation.

"I go to the beach," said Marie Armes, "and if it is too cold to lie out, I walk my dog by the water. Of course I'm really just watching the surfers." When asked what he does in his spare time, Rob Sandefur replied truthfully, "I have no spare time."

The search for the perfect time will continue, but meanwhile just sit back and enjoy "General Hospital."

Skating was one of the most popular pastimes of last year; one of the participants was Charlie Parker.

David Lewis — "Go South or don't go at all."

BURIED . . .

Get Your Shovel

One of the privileges of being a senior is having a locker to call your own. After two years of jammed locks, crumpled papers and the inevitable loss of textbooks, you finally were assigned your very own locker. Hey! Why are there two government books in there, and what's with the wooden shelves? Oh, you're sharing again! You say you can live with a little chaos. So what if your locker mate has you Modern English in Action book just when you need it. Does it really matter that you will get detention for being late one more time because of that jammed lock? Is it a great tragedy when the final draft of your research paper got misplaced among the other papers in the Mt. Trashmore Jr. that is developing there in the bottom of your locker? Amy Jeroy thinks that the problems of sharing a locker are worth putting up with: I share a locker with three other people. It's crowded, but it's really nice to see my friends between classes."

STAR STRUCK

A Return From The Past

What a good year for continuing traditions, for making great changes, and for looking for comets! Taking the theme "As Far As You Can See," the seniors created their own vision of what a successful Homecoming could be.

No one could have predicted the feverish pitch of the spirit competitions, which the seniors dominated. The Class of '86 expressed its commitment to spirit in a number of impressive ways: an early-morning parade of cars decked in green and gold; a group of seniors that stormed the gym floor at the pep rally, chanting, "Seniors! Seniors!"

"I was so excited about the Homecoming game," said Michelle Criscione. "Definitely not a disappointment!"

As far as we could see, it was a Homecoming to remember. What a game! What a team! What a class!

CHEERS

To The Class of 86'

SENIOR SPIRIT (seen 'yor speer'it) n. 1. a group of extremely enthusiastic seniors 2. the act of yelling, screaming, and cheering at games and pep rallies 3. what it takes to win "most spirited class" during Spirit Week.

It's hard to ignore it, in fact it's impossible not to notice how enthusiastic the senior class was last year, and how much spirit they have always generated. The Class of '86 usually dominated spirit contests at pep rallies, and also had the largest and most vocal cheering section at sporting events. When asked to express her feelings about senior spirit, Shelia Allison Higgins replied, "Beyond explanation . . . Out of control!!! Jim Youngberg summed it up in one word: "Mahvelous!"

The class of '86 has set a new tradition. May it live on.

Seniors demonstrate their pride as they decorate their cars early in the morning at Hardee's.

JUNIOR JAZZ

MOVING TO A DIFFERENT BEAT

The spirited, yet unnoticed, freshmen and sophomores of yesterday have grown into the rowdy and rambunctious juniors of today who are exploding with school pride. The enthusiasm of the class of '87 has increased in momentum yearly — can you imagine what they will be like next year as seniors? You've heard of the spirit of '76? Well, now there's the spirit of '87 — the class of '87, that is.

Wendell Cosenza, known for his outstanding red hair and height, enthusiastically explained his view of the class, "We're happenin'; our spirit's accelerating for the senior year." This seems to be the general consensus. As each year progresses, the class seems to be getting more involved and participating more. The Junior "jazz" appeared at football games, pep rallies, and undoubtedly ran rampant during spirit week.

The key to this exuberance seems to be the simple fact that they are now "juniors", finally getting their chance to laugh at "underclassmen". But hey, we've all been there before, and we're just carrying on the tradition.

Thinking of graduation only a year away, would bring a smile to any junior's face. The junior jazz is coming fast, so . . . Look out! Senior spunk is still to come!!!

Juniors not only keep up with the score of the game but also the whereabouts of the post-victory celebrations.

THE REAL THING

THE BEST OF THE JUNIORS ...

... share a locker with at least three other people
 ... come to class with only half a notebook because the other half was left behind in the locker struggle
 ... would walk 5 miles rather than ride the bus
 ... beg Mom and Dad to borrow the car on Friday night

... wake up at 7:00 when their ride comes at 7:20
 ... are unconscious in first bell Monday due to a socially gruelling weekend
 ... strive to keep up their infamous reputation of being punctual, tidy, and overall organized
 ... right guys?!?

Greg Super and Paul Doyle attempt to hide themselves from fans behind their Carrera Sunglasses. Aren't they just too cool?

TIRED OF THE CLASSROOM

When you feel as if you're about to slip into a coma during class, what can you do to save yourself? There are several possible answers to this question confronted by every student six bells a day, five days a week. Among your favorites are:

- 1) flipping through a magazine hidden behind that terribly interesting history book.
- 2) reading that juicy Harlequin Romance that just can't be put down.
- 3) staring at the terrific-looking member of the opposite sex while (supposedly) figuring out a math equation.
- 4) writing and passing notes (carefully).

- 5) catching up on next bell's homework.
- 6) gazing out the window or at a fly on the wall if you happen to be on an inside room.
- 7) eating those Ho-Ho's leftover from lunch.
- 8) making plans for the coming weekend . . .
- 9) . . . or recalling those fond memories from the past weekend.
- 10) using your artistic talents to draw stick figures on your notebook.
- 11) watching the second hand of the clock tick all three thousand seconds of the bell.

If all else fails, and you absolutely cannot think of anything to do, you can always sleep on it.

RELAX: THE CLASSIC SUMMER

Sunning, surfing, partying: the essentials of any bona fide Virginia Beach summer. Summer vacation just isn't worthwhile if you can't sleep in until at least eleven in the morning. Even if you do get up early, it is only to go fall asleep again in the sun on the beach. That's the life. Although many of us were working on that savage tan, unfortunate others were working hard on building their bank accounts, either at the beach or at various other local places. Meg Dobson commented about her job at T.J. Maxx, "The money was the only thing keeping me from the beach, but it was worth it."

However, while many of us homebodies were hanging about the house, bumming around the beach, or working the spare hours away, others were tripping the light fantastic in the fashion capitals of the world.

"London was my favorite city because of the friendly people, the action, and especially the clothes," said Molly Whelahan, who spent a month of her summer in Italy, France, and Britain.

So, while many of us were reaching for the snooze buttons on our alarm clocks, others of us were up an at 'em. Whether it was surfing in North Carolina or shopping in Paris, not all of us slept our summer away.

A CLASS OF ORIGINALITY

JUNIORS FIND COOKIE PIES A STALE IDEA

At a casual class meeting, one could find Treasurer Alex Sadler giving details of the upcoming fundraiser, while Bobby Torbert, fundraising chairman, devoured his eighteenth brownie. President Caddy Wood, Secretary Kim Brown, Vice-President Kathy Slough, and Second Vice-President Molly Whelahan are scattered about the room.

These were the Junior Class officers, who made this year a success — unique, and not so traditional. The sale of coupon books was introduced, replacing the annual cookie pie sale, to raise money for Ring Dance, to which every junior looks forward. Homecoming: another memorable moment. Despite spirits dampened by rain at the start, the juniors pulled through with their best float yet. Well said by Alex Sadler, "The Junior Class — we're in there."

We can credit this eventful year to the officers. With their help . . . WE DID IT!

With so many committees to check on, Molly Whelahan often has trouble seeing eye to eye.

We Have Spirit, Yes We Do . . .

We Have Spirit, How 'bout You?

"We've got spirit! Yes, we do!" yelled the cheerleaders. The enthusiastic sophomores responded, "We've got spirit! Yes, we do!"

The class of '88 was closely knit and sociable. They worked best as a unit. "Working together makes us more school-spirited and especially more class-oriented," said Melinda Foley, a sophomore member of the Homecoming Court. One could see the proof of our spirit in the football stands and at the great wrestling matches, for we always had an enthusiastic cheering section.

"We're not afraid to show our feelings toward our school," said Cathy Long, another sophomore elected to the Homecoming Court. "How right she was. The sophomores seemed to be ready, willing, and able to accept any challenge presented to them. They were capable of doing it all with spirit. They had spirit, yes they did!"

Throughout all of spirit week, the sophomores proved they had the school spirit by dressing up. The spirit days were: College Day, Gangster/Flapper Day, Hero Day, and Green and Gold Day. Sophomores showed off their spirit by dressing up for every day. The class of '88 had the spirit, yes they did.

Sophomore vice-president Gina Clark lets that William and Mary spirit shine through on College Day.

Sophomores Socialize

The Talking Never Ends . . .

Noise, confusion, gossip: that's lunch! If lunch were a credited course, most sophomores would pass with flying colors. Since the lunch bell was lengthened to a full fifty minutes, some students used their time to eat, to study more, to take "Behind the Wheel", or to simply take a snooze. However, the majority of sophomores participated in their absolute favorite pastime: talking.

"The lunch period seemed a bit long, but it was useful as a study hall and a time to socialize," remarked Carol Pasley.

Sophomore President Marc Mayette said of the lunch hour, "It was a perfect time to see your friends and talk to them without getting yelled at by a teacher."

While many tenth graders found the fifty minutes for lunch a bit much, in general, many of them appreciated the extra twenty minutes. After all, twenty minutes is a lot of gossip time.

Homecoming . . . Take Me Out To The Ball Game

On Homecoming night, the sophomore float, entitled "Let Your Dreams Take You As Far As You Can See," was paraded around the football field at halftime. The sophomore float brought many sophomores together, and it took an enormous amount of friendship, hard work, and cooperation to get the float off the ground. The float represented the dreams of the class of 1988: sports, graduation, and world peace. Sophomores worked for five days to accomplish their goal of making the float the best in the competition. They could not have done it without their sponsor Mrs. Moser, or their chairman, Missy Bell, a sophomore who dedicated much time and hard work into building the float. "It was really a good opportunity to meet fellow sophomores. Our float was not only fun, but hard work as well" remarked Missy Bell. "With all of the enthusiasm, spirit, and hard work put into the float, we achieved our goal by making it the best we could," said Gina Clark.

It took time and effort on the part of the Sophomores who participated. "Our dreams are more than fantasies. That is what our float is all about," said Denise Hobbs.

Sophomores Stand Out . . . For Their Rides

Sitting on the curb, bundled in jackets and sweaters, they anxiously awaited the bus, which was late, as usual. Upperclassmen drove by in their warm cars, relishing the heat. The summer was over and the tenth grade had arrived, but the sophomores were stuck at the bus stop — AGAIN!

They had outgrown the freshmen and were now older and too sophisticated to participate in the spitball fights and paper-throwing contests. In other words, they were too old to have fun on the bus. However, they were not old enough to have their own cars, a symbol of freedom.

"As I watch the juniors and seniors ride by in their cars, laughing, and listening to the radio," remarked Carmen Akbari, "I envy them and their cars."

With junior year on the horizon, there was a visible light at the end of the tunnel . . . The headlights of a car, NOT of a bus.

Political Promises Sophomores Didn't Fall Short

Promises, promises, promises. The candidates promised to follow through on their commitments last spring at the sophomore elections, and the ones who really could were elected. So our new officers, Marc Mayette as president, Gina Clark as vice-president, Jennifer Koss as secretary, and Alan Hayth as treasurer, began working to make the Class of '88 the best ever. They did so by trying to involve the sophomore class in various class and school activities. One activity was Spirit Week. The purpose of Spirit Week and the Homecoming pep rally was to trigger spirit competition between the classes and to support our school at Homecoming. The sophomores showed their spirit and support for Cox by entering the winning banner in the Banner Contest. "I was really impressed with how much spirit our class showed at the games, Spirit Week, and throughout the year," remarked Jennifer Koss. The sophomore officers also had many fundraisers, including discount cards and Halograms, to raise money for the treasury. "I am proud of our success and hope that we can achieve even greater goals in the future," commented Marc Mayette. The sophomore class hopes next year's sophomores will follow in the footsteps of the Class of '88.

Not Just a Bunch of Rookies

Freshmen Have Experience

In September, the members of the Freshman Class pooled their experiences from their seventh and eighth grade years, and elected officers. With Matt Valerio as president, Monique Dockter and Scott Eun as first and second vice presidents, respectively Kristy Bivins as secretary, and Trey White as class treasurer, the Class of '89 had a wide variety of talent at the helm. Class sponsor, Mrs. Kim Hux said, "We have a very good, very bright group of officers. Enthusiasm is definitely an asset, and they are a very committed group." The officers led the class in a successful Homecoming float and a fundraiser.

The opinion among the 9th graders was that the officers were an excellent team, contributing to a good beginning.

The Freshmen officers for the year of '85-'86 were (from left to right) Matt Valerio, president, Kristy Bivins, secretary, Scott Eun, second vice president, Monique Dockter, first vice president, and Trey White, class treasurer.

Learning the Ropes

Orientation

All incoming students apprehensively awaited the day of school orientation. They entered the school with excitement to share their schedules with their friends. More students came than expected, therefore the school tour was in a slight state of confusion. The helpful cheerleaders and coquettes were the tour guides for the new students. Most of the incoming Freshmen were cooperative, but there were still some who decided their own tour with their friends was better. Despite the confusion, the tour did turn out to be successful, because it prepared the students for that frightening and confusing first day of high school.

Freshmen John Parker and Trey White anxiously compare schedules.

A Spectrum of Talent

Freshmen Add a Little Color to Activities

Those Freshmen! They were everywhere . . . on the field, in the halls, on teams and in clubs. The amount of their involvement had a significant effect on all types of activities, from sports to class to clubs.

"French Club wouldn't be nearly as successful as it is," commented Miss Margaret Oakley. "The Freshmen constitute the majority of the enrollment and they add so much to our organization."

While the Class of '89 was an integral of club and class activities, they participated in sports and cheering at junior high schools. On any given day in the fall, it wasn't unusual to see the burgundy and grey of Great Neck Junior High School; Independence's red, white and blue; or the orange and blue sported by Lynnhaven athletes. "Although they represented different schools, the Freshmen worked together as well as any class I've ever sported," said Mrs. Kim Hux.

With such a diversity of skills and backgrounds, the Class of '89 had a lot to offer, and as sophomores, next year they will under the Green and Gold to continue their history of excellence.

As Far As You Can See

The Freshman Float

Taking into account the fact that last year's float wasn't even considered a real float, the freshmen float, illustrating the Homecoming theme "As Far as You Can See", was a vast improvement in several terms. Overall, they were proud of this accomplishment since it took time, patience, and loads of cooperation.

Looking at the float, one wondered whether they were on an island in the middle of the sea, or in Virginia Beach, standing behind a wooden pirate ship. There were five students clad in pirate suits and waving swords. The crowd was treated to live entertainment as two pirates ran alongside the float, chasing a knight. The wounded knight and the dead knight on board symbolized the Kellam Knights, the Falcons' prey for that evening.

The turnout of volunteers to work on the float was impressive. Of course, the class officers were there, but still more turned out to lend a helping hand. "I thought the idea for the float was pretty neat and I'm glad I could help with it." says Lisa Crutchfield.

"Now this is how you do it!" says Kevin Brooks while Arron Spence decides to watch from a distance.

Onward and Upward

Freshmen Start Their Climb

Freshmen — they can be seen all over, taking part in the summer scene. You saw them lounging at the beach, catching a few rays, or just checking out the sights. Dark, sun-bronzed surfers caught the waves showing off their surfing skills. Behind Lynnhaven Jr. High School, hoards of them waited patiently for their chance at the skateboard ramps.

A majority of freshmen spent much of their free time at the mall. They went shopping for new school clothes and other necessities of any teenager's life, such as the latest record or this month's magazine. Meeting friends and just having a great time is mainly what they were concerned with. Much of the time, simply looking for something to do enabled them to pass away their time.

At the beach, Ricky Pouliot catches a wave.

As is true every summer, the movies was another "in place" to be. To see movies and to be seen at the movies — that was the thing to do. "St. Elmo's Fire", "The Breakfast Club", and "Pee Wee's Big Adventure" were among the top favorites.

"'St. Elmo's Fire'" was the best.' Why? "'Rob Lowe, why else?'" commented Amanda Freed.

So the summer passed on, and it was time to return to a 7:30 to 2:00 schedule. Looking into any class, one could see them slipping into a reverie of the past summer. Now their days would be filled with math problems, grammar, and trying to find their way around a new school. Ah, those lazy summer days!

At Godfather's Pizza, fellow freshmen reach out for more than a second slice . . . Monique Docktor's nose.

Mr. Philip Williams and Mr. Michael Porter seem dismayed at the action in one of Cox's field hockey games.

Mrs. Lottie B. Waters gives a speech praising the first nine-weeks' honor students in the school's auditorium.

While vacationing in Montana this summer, Dr. Burletine Karlen stopped to pose with her catch of the day.

Excellence in All Areas . . . Starts With the Administration

It has been three years since the new Cox High School opened, and our administration has continued to enhance its reputation as being one of the finest high schools in Va. Beach.

Mrs. Waters was commended for the excellent job she has been doing as principal of our school. She was presented with a gold plaque and received the Va. Beach Association of Educational Office personnel's "Administrator of the Year" award.

"During the three years that we have been in the new building, I have seen the student body adjust more each year to the new facility. Students are no longer awed by the size of the building; instead, they now have a sense of pride in it. The excellent academic and extra-curricular accomplishments of our students have helped to build school spirit this year to the highest peak that I've seen at Cox High School," said Mrs. Waters.

Cox also acquired a new assistant principal in addition to Mr. Williams, and Dr. Karlen, Mr. Michael W. Porter is the newest assistant. When asked about his adjustment he said, "So far, I'm having the best year of my professional career — great school, fantastic people, teachers and students, and the best administrative companions one could ever wish for. I don't think I'm supposed to be having all this fun."

Guiding Faces

Pillars of Our School

She called your mom when you get sick.
He issued you your parking sticker.
They sent your transcripts off to college.
They typed up memos of pertinent information.
They helped you search for reference books.
Without them, would you have known where to look?
No one really knew how much they do.

She gave you change for a dollar when you needed to call home.
She put an ice pack on your knee and soothed
you with loving sympathy.
They wrote you letters of recommendation, all in hopes of great achievement.
So next time you ask, "What has Cox done for me?"
Read on and you shall see.

Outside of School

Teachers Are People, Too

It seemed that teachers were never seen anywhere but in school. They just spent their time thinking of interesting ways to teach the material to their students. One would even think that all their spare time was spent making up quizzes and grading papers.

Contrary to this misconstrued belief, many of Cox's teachers could be found at auctions; in Seashore State Park, running; sailing; riding bikes; playing tennis; skiing; and gardening.

Other teachers, however, like Mrs. Gardener, Mrs. Newill, and Mr. Rode really enjoyed being with their families.

Not only did the teachers have outside interests, but some also had been in specific activities. For instance, Mr. Hank Armstrong has refereed college basketball. Ms. Betty Woodhouse has done art exhibitions, and Mrs. Don Martin has run in marathons. Mrs. Vesta Cruser has written children's storybooks, and Mrs. Neola Waller was awarded "Virginia Mathematics Teacher of the Year."

TOMMY LABARBERA — (Psychology) hunts and plays tennis.

JANET LAHM — (Home Ec.) goes horseback riding; loves gourmet cooking.

GARY LEAGAN — (U.S. Gov't)

Tedious Tasks . . .

That Teachers Fulfill

When students were home sleeping in bed on an In-Service-Day, teachers were expected to come to school with grades averaged.

While students were busy munching in lunch and gabbing away with friends, teachers had to keep a standing patrol over everyone and oversee that the lunch hour was running smoothly.

When the two o'clock bell rang on Monday, students made a mad rush to get to the buses; however, teachers were required to stay after for faculty meetings, or make up work.

Just think of all the papers that teachers had to grade after school, then you realized that students were not the only ones who look forward to weekends.

Mr. Tommy LaBarbera's patience seems to have run out.

DON MARTIN — (Office Tech., Business Law) runs and rides a mountain bike.

JEANETTE MARTINO — (Earth Sci.) loves watching her sons grow up.

SUSAN MAY — (Marketing Ed.) plays racquetball and scuba dives.

DEBORAH MONCOL — (Gen. Business) dances.

DEBORA MOSHER — (Marine, Earth Science) loves most outdoor activities.

TERRI SAWYER — (Health/P.E.) enjoys playing field hockey and volleyball.

... WITH HARD WORK AND HOMEWORK

"Success is one percent inspiration and ninety-nine percent perspiration," said Thomas Edison. Some strove to improve their timing; some did that extra push-up. To athletes, success meant a letter on their jackets.

Others ran that extra mile, too. We spent the extra time on our homework, or worked on perfecting our artwork. We worked for our goals. When we reaped our just rewards, we basked in them. We were a breed apart; we were the Acadamia.

We succeeded; we failed. We stood out; we blended in. Whatever we did, we did our best.

The margins are set, and you're ready to type.

The Best and the Brightest

Students Who Excel

It seemed that the winners of academic honors and the participants in non-athletic extracurricular programs were always the same. Morning after morning, the announcements called the names of the National Merit Scholars, Governor's School, delegates to Leadership Workshop, and seldom were there any surprises. These honors were meaningless to some students who wondered what their real importance was. The importance lay in set goals and the commitment to achieve those goals.

Commitment was the key word, Governor's School and Magnet School for the Arts lasted for a whole month. "Governor's School was an experience of a lifetime, especially since you can only do it once," said Sarah Ashton, who attended Governor's School at Virginia Tech over the summer. At both Governor's School and Magnet School, students took part in concentrated classes in their particular field of interest whether it be dance, science, or the humanities.

Senior Paul Robertson finds le Francais amusant.

In German class, Herr Larry Becker assists Eric Townsend on his "Klassenarbeit."

"And then it went SMASH!" explains Jeff Ames to Jennifer Lipfert.

What's The Good Word?

English And Language

At Busch Gardens' Old Country, you can move easily from Germany to England or from France to Italy. Cox's second floor offers such diversity. On one hall alone you might hear Señora Hilda Wilson's Level 4 students commenting on fashion in Spanish or Herr Larry Becker lecturing on the finer points of a "schuhplattler." The Foreign Language Department offers Levels 1-5 in Latin, French, Spanish, and German. While most students opt only for the three years needed to receive The Governor's Seal, a dedicated few continue in the upper levels.

Students take mandatory English courses each year that they are in school, wrestling with enigmas like The Odyssey or The Scarlet Letter. In addition to the required English courses, students also have the option of choosing an elective such as Advanced Composition, Public Speaking, Journalism, or Drama. The skills taught in English have applications beyond the classrooms. Diana van Valkenburgh remarked, "English is crucial to every aspect of life — college applications and clear self-expression in an interview. You need it to survive." From the King's English, to La Lingua Latina, Falcon Country has it all.

Intent on her role, Pam Brien finds English to be a Wonderland.

Comparing answers in English class, Stacy Bass and Crystal Bagby find two minds are better than one.

By the Numbers

Math and Business

The "Real World" looms large on the horizon, particularly for those who choose to bypass college and opt for employment immediately after high school. Regardless of the choice of work or advanced study, business and mathematics courses are beneficial for the preparation of either.

Technology influences nearly every aspect of modern life, and fields requiring math and business experience are wide open.

Typing is an asset in almost every career today. With computers becoming so widely used, typing is practically a necessity of mastering the keyboard. A secretary would especially find this skill indispensable; typing also makes stenography and bookkeeping much easier.

Accounting and math courses are important for careers in finance or engineering.

Ricky Engel, a sophomore, said, "Math may be dull now, but it will be important for my future."

Although a geometry proof or a logarithm may seem irrelevant to the Monday through Friday world of the high school student, the discipline and organization needed to find their solutions also result in a better organized and well disciplined person.

Morel Symons, a senior observed, "I feel that from my work in math I've obtained a good sense of logic, theories that are useful to many other courses and basic skills that will continue to aid me all through life."

Oh, Gee "Why can't I design as well in art?" questions Sandy Haselman.

Attentively as she sits, Susan Dennis is accountin' the hours left in school.

Hitting the keys, Business students Greg Castle and David Mascitti work on Accounting.

Why sleep at home? Ryan Dobbins shows us Geometry is just as relaxing as bed.

Angling her students into learning, Mrs. Crocker teaches Geometry.

Independent Living student Shelia Higgins works on Independent testing.

Fashion Merchandising student Monica Gunn works on a new display.

The Real World

Home Economics and Marketing Education

Frequently, students busily rushing from class to class were confronted with the tantalizing aromas of goodies baking. The delicious smells were due to the cooking labs in the Home Economics Department. Home-Ec is far more than just cookies. The competency based curriculum offers a range of courses such as Marriage and the Family, and Independent Living. Although Home Economics courses have been considered primarily courses for girls, more recently, the male enrollment has increased. The objectives of the Home Economics course offerings are to prepare any students for whatever the future offers.

The Marketing Education program is a joint working arrangement between the high school and businesses in the community, such as retail or wholesale stores or service businesses. Students receive classroom instruction directly related to the occupation in which they are engaged. At the same time they acquire work experience and further training with the business that provides part-time employment. Courses available in Marketing Education are Fundamentals of Marketing, Marketing, Advanced Marketing, Fashion Merchandising, and Advanced Fashion.

Academics: A.P. Courses

A variety of students yearned to experience high-level, advanced courses. This desire was satisfied by the many advanced placement courses offered at Cox. The classes dealt with many careers: A.P. Biology, History, Computer Science, Calculus, and English.

The grueling hours spent studying for the college level courses left students bewildered and frustrated. "History is incredibly hard

... I sometimes think I won't make it," exclaimed Christi Edwards. The advanced nature of the courses demanded long study hours.

Why are there such mind bending courses? An A.P. class prepared the student for the college environment due to the heavy work load, not to mention the exam at the end of the year. Those who scored highly on the exam would be exempt from some courses as college freshmen.

Perhaps the most important result of the A.P. Courses was the sense of accomplishment acquired after completing the courses. "Through all the frustration and disappointment, it was definitely worth it. I proved to myself that I could do it," reflected a happy Paul Roboertson.

Keeping In Tune

It's An Art

From tuning cars to tuning instruments and from finding harmony of color to harmony in music, the Arts are as diverse as shades of the spectrum and have as many uses as the wheel.

Industrial Arts for example, gives students a chance to discover and improve the basic life-skills in a vocational application. Courses such as wood-working, electronics, communications and metals technology offer a hands-on practical introduction to students.

At the other end of the scale, the Music Department refined and perfected students' musical talents. The marching band traveled to regional competition, performed at local functions, such as the Neptune Festival and all football games. The choral branch of the music department offered madrigals and choir, which joined to perform an annual Christmas program, a holiday tradition.

The Drama Department co-sponsors two plays annually, one in the fall and the musical in the spring giving students a chance to learn the ropes in Theater Arts.

The Art curriculum expanded this year to include Art Appreciation and Art I-V. During Student Art Month, Art students exhibited not only the fundamentals that they learned in class, but their outstanding talents as well.

Be they practical, musical, a theatrical or colorful, the Arts flourish and are all equally fine.

PSAT's and SAT's

When you peered into your alphabet soup, perhaps you took your spoon and unconsciously arranged the letters to form SAT or PSAT. Well, maybe not unconsciously. After all, both tests were an important factor in choosing colleges. For many people, they were a ticket to their particular college choice.

The letters SAT stand for Scholastic Aptitude Test. The PSAT is a preliminary test that prepares a student for the SAT's. Said Mrs. Owens, a guidance counselor, "The PSAT is a barometer for how well you will do on the SAT's." Through high scores, one could qualify for numerous scholarships and grants. The most well-known scholarship is the National Merit Scholarship. The contestants were chosen by their PSAT scores in relation to a median of the highest scores. 1800 students were given $2,000 scholarships, which can take a big chunk out of rising tuition costs.

So although you may have looked at that little SAT booklet and thought "So what?" you should definitely study it. After all, in a sense, your future, your next few years and therefore the rest of your life may depend on it. Of course, whether or not you go to a good college may depend on what scholarships you can win.

Social Studies and Sciences

It's not unusual to walk by a Senior government class and spot a local politician speaking to the classes. This year twelfth-grade classes were treated to pre-election speeches from Bob Purkey, G. William Whitehurst, and Meyera Oberndorf. The government classes also participated in mock elections and campaigns. The daily work included those infamous current-events quizzes, and "Have you read the paper?" was a common question among Seniors.

The Social Studies department also offered a choice of freshman and sophomore courses, one of which is the new World Cultures course, in addition to World Geography, and World History. Juniors studied American History from its foundation to the present. A number of Cox students opted for the Advanced Placement American History course which offers an opportunity to gain college credit. Electives in the Social Studies program include Sociology, Psychology, and International Relations.

The Science Curriculum continued to expand and diversify beyond Biology, Earth Science, Chemistry, and Physics. Not only was Advanced Placement Biology offered again, but a new course, Marine Biology was made available to students for the first time.

... IN GREEN AND GOLD

We toiled and sweated for success. We took the battering, the bruising, and the pain. We suffered and we triumphed. Most of all, we were doing what we wanted to do. Sure, there were late nights and early mornings. No matter. We were pushing to reach our limits.

We represented the school and showed the rest what the Falcons were made of. Individuals' victories boosted the team, and team victories boosted the individuals. If we lost, we lost with pride; if we won, we won with grace. The work was play, and we loved it.

Lady Falcons Wind Up A Great Season

Last spring's softball team had several outstanding individuals including the senior tri-captains, Mary Martin, Carolyn Willandt, and Mary Fike. Junior pitcher Renee Meyers, the team's most valuable player, threw strike after strike to lead the Lady Falcons to an excellent season. Placing second in the Beach District, they displayed the intensity and enthusiasm characteristic of the Falcons. The overall quality of the team was clear when seven of the players were selected for the Beach All-District teams, including Mary Fike and Shelia Higgins.

Baseball Swings Into Action

The Falcon's baseball season did not turn out as expected. The team worked their way through the season under Coach Tom Fisher.

Led by co-captains Tom Boothe, first baseman, and Mark Barker, shortstop, the team endured. Tom Boothe said he hopes for a baseball scholarship to V.C.U. Mark Barker, who started as shortstop, said, "I am contemplating a great season next year."

It takes hard work and much practice for team members like Dwayne McNeal to win.

Determination

The Mark Of A True Runner

The outdoor track team, though working hard and practicing everyday, achieved only a 1 and 5 record. Their spirit was not diminished however. They kept a stiff upper lip and limber legs for competition. The teams determination was admirable, and they kept up the hard work throughout the competition season.

Half of the girls team was comprised of returning team members. The boys team numbered about twenty competitors, all of whom made strong showings at the several meets. Though not a year for victory, it was not a year for defeat either. All team members worked hard and refused to give up.

Girls Earn District Title

The 1984-85 Lady Falcon's soccer team could only be described as a Cinderella story. Not having enough people try-out to have team cuts, the Lady Falcons knew they would have a tough season ahead of them. Under the fine coaching of Ms. Terri Sawyer, the team soon began to come together. Ms. Sawyer, in only her second year coaching, found a winning combination. Senior captains Stephanie Shupe and Kim Tamraz, along with Dawn Fraioli and Suzie Hall, provided team leadership. Junior standouts Kristen Epperly and Erin Walsh (a transfer from W.T. Woodson) added to the solid team play. Sophomore goalkeeper Liz Prodan was also a major contribution to the team. The Lady Falcons ended their regular season with a respectable record. At the end of the season, Cox was tied for first place with Green Run and Kempsville. After defeating both teams in a district play off, the Lady Falcons won the district title. Cox then advanced to the regional finals, but lost to Maury by one point. Last year's season turned out to be very productive. The team should be promising once again with seven returning players for the 1985-86 season.

The Team's Goal . . . Playing for Kicks

Under the guidance of Coach Jim Snodgrass, the 1984-85 Cox soccer team had an impressive season suffering only defeats to co-champions Green Run and Kempsville. In compiling a 10-4 record, the Falcons defense registered nine shut outs while the offense scored twenty-three goals.

Honored for their performance on the field were Geoff Campbell and Dave Johnson who were selected to the 1st Beach and 2nd Beach District teams. "The team was younger than most of the teams we played, however, we demonstrated skill equal or above our adversary," said Geoff Campbell.

"Next season will be a prime season for the team. We will be older and stronger. Coach Snodgrass is an aggressive coach, and we will be number ONE!" commented Dave Johnson.

Also recognized were Travis Leathers and Tony Goode for Honorable Mention in the Beach District. Look for the Falcons to be a strong contender in 1985-86.

A Lot of Racquet Nets District Title

The boys' tennis team rolled to its second consecutive Beach District Championship. Cruising along with a 10 — record, the Falcon netters suffered a surprising defeat at the hands of archrival First Colonial, only their second district loss in two years. However, the Falcons revenged their loss when they met First Colonial again in a playoff match. Cox prevailed 6-3 due to strong singles play by juniors Lou Nguyen and Jim Youngberg, sophomore Michael Davis and freshman Michael Jaffee. The win was secured when seniors Hunter Tully and Lou Nguyen won their match at the third doubles spot, thus sending the Falcon netters again to the Eastern Regional Tournament.

The Falcons' number one player, Peter Brinkman, completed another outstanding season by finishing second in the district and regional tournaments. Other team members with outstanding records were Lou Nguyen, Michael Davis, Carl Trafton, and Hunter Tully. Freshman Kevin Segerblom added strength to the number three doubles team.

Despite having only one senior on the squad, coach Leon Hoots looked forward to defending the team championship title for a third consecutive year in 1986.

The strength of Carl Trafton's strong forehand volley earned him the number six singles spot.

En route to one of his twelve victories, Michael Jaffee concentrates on his backhand.

To Tackle Victory . . .

A Touch of Triumph

The football team, which provided Falcon fans with excitement every Friday night, finished their season better than last year. Although not the record hoped for at the start of the season, there were still many reasons the Falcons can be proud. The '85 season included an undefeated record at home. The victory on homecoming night against Kellam made the evening complete. The Falcons were also undefeated against Eastern district teams, including a come from behind victory over fourth-ranked Lake Taylor in what coach Al Habit called "one of the most exciting games this school has ever seen."

In the annual game against arch-rival First Colonial, Cox lost by only two points. When asked about the game, co-captain Chris Shellhammer said, "It was one of the toughest losses I've ever experienced because we played so well and with so much emotion, only to let it get away at the end."

Senior defensive tackle William Emerson, when asked to sum up the season said, "Even though we finished 3-4-2, we could have easily been 6-3 or 7-2 with a couple of breaks." Added center Rob Cave, "I think we played exciting football and gave the students something to get enthused about. It was also a lot of fun which is what it's all about." Mike Page and Mark Peterson both agreed that the team played consistently good football all year long, but suffered from injuries and bad breaks. They also felt that the Kempsville and Green Run were the games they really lost. The others they felt like were lost because of the team's mistakes.

Hockey Team Meets Its Goals

The Field Hockey team had yet another successful season. The Falcons, with a record of 1-1, won the district championship. The team then went on to win the regional and state championships.

In the regional play-offs, Booker T. Washington was defeated 2-0, with goals by Kristen Epperly and Woody Ballew in the semi-finals. In the finals against Lafayette, Geraldine Maraia and Kristen Epperly made one goal each, bringing a 2-0 victory.

The team travelled to Northern Virginia for the state play-offs. Monocan was defeated 1-0 when Laura Goetz scored a goal. With a goal delivered by Kristen Epperly, the final match brought a 1-0 victory over West Potomac and a state title.

The team, led by co-captains Woody Ballew and Erin Walsh, had nine seniors: Rachel Atkinson, Woody Ballew, Kristen Epperly, Deedee George, Laura Goetz, Lynn Nelson, Kristi Ritter, Jackie Stanfield, and Erin Walsh. Junior players Laura Edwards, Kathy Fosina, Geraldine Maraia, Cathy Sereno, and Kathy Slough, along with sophomores Kristen Horton and Monica Stewart complete the team.

Under Coach Nancy Fowlkes, the Cox hockey team has captured three state, four regional, and five district titles in the last five years. Miss Fowlkes said of the team, "The team was special to me in both their talent and skill and in their ability to get along. I looked forward to practice everyday, and the chance to be around them."

The feeling was mutual as Woody Ballew commented, "Ms. Fowlkes deserves her 'Coach of the Year' award. Not only is she a great coach who makes average, talented players into state champs, but, also, she is a great person."

Next year's team plans to continue the Cox winning tradition.

Even with the devastating heat, Jan Marriot keeps up her pace to the finish of the race.

Running to the Top

The Peak Of Perfection

They might not have had much manpower, but they certainly had willpower. The cross country team was not to be overlooked. The many incoming freshman and sophomore members made a strong showing. Steve Zanetti, co-captain, admired the team, "It is a humbling experience to be beaten by underclassmen, but the experience is invaluable." Sophomore Kit

Ehrgood was the only team member to qualify for State Competition.

Team members pushed and supported each other. "Sure its tough work to get up and run around Mt. Trashmore a couple of times, but it's worth it if you love it. What else would I do on a Saturday morning?" asked Jeff Schofield.

Falcons Swing Into Action

The golf team had quite a productive year. The overall record for the season was commendable. At the final match with Princess Anne, the team shot a 314, the best score since the mid-70's. Advancing to the regional golf tournament, David Mascitti then placed third in the region thus progressing to the State tournament in which he finished in a tie for 16th place out of 64.

Coach Tom Smith was the power behind the team. He was very pleased with the season and hoped for an even more successful record in '86.

The returning players from the '85 season were Tommy Gregory, Robb Bagby, David Mascitti, Dan Murphy, Brandon Boyd, Mike Penny and Greg Allen.

"We hope the momentum from the '85 season will carry over to the '86 to make it an even better year," commented Wes David.

The girls tennis team successfully completed their season ranking second in the district. Their only losses were to First Colonial, whom they met twice. "We really wanted to beat First Colonial again," said Caddy Wood, "but we did play well against them." Senior Shannon McLeod remarked, "I've never seen anyone try as hard to win as these girls did when we played First Colonial."

The team's manager was freshman Laura Warren. Returning seniors for the Falcons were Missy Tourgee, Liz Jones, and co-captains Shannon McLeod and Nicole James. Juniors included Caddy Wood, who completed her second year, and Rachael Schmidt and Jennifer Darden, new additions to the team. Sophomore team members were Mary Carlson, Holly Shupe, Mandy Davis, and Beth Davis.

Although the team did not attain the District Title, the team manager, Laura Warren, was quite satisfied with their accomplishments. Junior Rachael Schmidt said, "Next year will be promising regardless of the loss of two starting seniors." One thing agreed upon by all team members was that Coach Holland really pulled them together and made an usually independent sport into a whole team effort.

Falcon Wrestlers . . .

Virginia's Finest!!!!

Warming up to "Bad to the Bone" and entering to "We are the Champions," the wrestlers proved to be just that. For the third straight year, the Falcons finished the season with a perfect record. The Falcons took on all challengers enroute to a flawless dual meet season, extending their unbeaten streak to forty-four matches over four years. "The crowd gets so intense and psyched you wonder who is more nervous, the wrestlers or the crowd," commented senior Kim Dustin.

Contributing to this success, was the return of former head wrestling coach Mr. Billy Guter-muth as assistant coach. His years of experience, along with Coach Gary Hartranft's expertise, proved to be formidable.

In the tournament season, the wrestlers proved that their dominance was not limited to dual meets. By advancing eleven wrestlers to the final of the Beach District tournament, the Falcons ran away with the trophy. Duplicating their performance of the previous week, the Falcons claimed the Eastern Region crown as well. Advancing five wrestlers to the finals of regionals, once there, the Falcons put on quite a show by winning all five matches. The regional champions advanced to take the State Title, icing the year's cake. What it took were dedication and drive, the keys to success. Ask any Falcon wrestler, he'll tell you.

Falcons

On the Rim of Success

"This year's team was just awesome to watch!" said spectator Scott Miller.

Indeed, the 1985-86 Falcon Basketball team rose to the occasion. Even though last year was not very successful, the Falcon's made up for it this season. The boy's team compiled a 9-3 record thus far, and were ranked number eight in the Tidewater Area Basketball Poll. The Falcons had a seven game winning streak going into the district game with Bayside.

This was one of the Falcons better seasons. It was a complete turn around from last year's team and the reason being said Reggie Moore, co-captain, "This year's squad had a lot more determination than last year's squad. Determination was what really pulled us together and made us work harder at being a team."

With only half of the season gone, the boys had won three times as many games as they won all of last year! This was due to the extra hard work from each player and the intense coaching from coach Marshall.

The team starting lineup was composed of three seniors and two juniors. Art Blausey (co-captain) and Reggie Moore were among the areas leading scorers through twelve games that season, Blausey averaging 15.8 points per game and Moore averaging 14.7 points per game. The Falcons have also received strong play from Frank Palermo, Kevin Shea, Matt Swingle, and Brian Fentress.

Senior Frank Palermo commented on this year's season: We had a tough team that had the spirit to make it happen. We all gave it our best shot.

This incredible team continued to inspire us all. They had the right stuff at the right time.

Gymnasts Are Head Over Heels

Gymnastics is one of the sports in which both a team and an individual effort is required. Gymnastics is a favorite sport with many people. It requires hard work, dedication, and, of course, poise, skill, and dexterity. The Falcon gymnasts possessed all of these.

The gymnasts practiced six days a week for three hours a day. They even practiced over the school holidays, including Christmas Eve Day, New Year's Eve Day, and New Year's Day. All this work was done with one goal in mind: to win the state championship.

Coach Haynes brought guidance and experience to the team for the past three years in a row. A former Falcon gymnast herself, she was the two-time state champion on the beam for James Madison University. Her aptitude for coaching is obvious, for her team has dominated the district time and time again. This year the gymnasts placed first in both districts and the region.

Indoor and Out . . . Cox Is Still On Track

"No Pain, No Gain" — This was the motto of the boys and girls Indoor Track Team. With these words, Coach Glenn Barr urged on his teams. The boys team ended the season with a 3-3 record and the girls only loss went to First Colonial. "This year the team has high hopes," commented Dwayne McNeal. "The team is young, versatile, and we are really striving for Districts."

Michelle Myers summed it up when she said, "Dealing with pain is a family effort for the track team."

Whether it is pushing each other during grueling practices at Mt. Trashmore or encouraging fellow teammates during a meet, the team always sticks together as a family.

Cheerleaders

Chatter, Cheers, and Chants

You saw them every Friday night, rallying the football team at each game. Depending on the weather, they would cheer for hours in stifling heat or with chattering teeth. The fall cheerleaders were responsible for boosting morale and promoting spirit at various sports events. If the crowd was down after the other team had scored a touchdown or goal, then the cheerleaders would pick the crowd back up again.

Led by co-captains Liz Jones and Missy Tourgee, the squad numbered 16 girls who worked together on banners and cheers.

As Amy Wilkins said, "Cheering's rewards come from knowing you've created unity and pride for your school."

But cheerleading isn't all glory and glamour. Dashing from one class to another, one always saw cheerleaders walking about with knocking knees and chattering teeth. It took dedication to wear a miniskirt on a 34 degree day. Dedication also meant hours of practice, endless chanting, and banner-making.

The fifteen-membered winter squad, led by Missy Tourgee and Liz Jones, cheered at all wrestling matches and basketball games. It must have been quite a feat to be heard over the roar of the cheering fans.

Involved with her work, Candy Marshall makes a banner.

... FOR SATISFACTION AND SERVICE

We worked and played. We served the community, and we took trips to Busch Gardens. We had different methods and projects, but we had one thing in common. We were made for the student, by the student. We had sponsors, but we made or broke ourselves. We proved we could be responsible. We became all we could through the clubs.

LEADERSHIP

Ticket to Excellence

Every student enrolled in Cox is a member of the S.C.A. The framework of the Student Cooperative Association allowed these students to take on some form of involvement.

Some of the many projects of the S.C.A. during the year were Marquee Mania, donations to flood victims, orientations, Nidus, Homecoming, dances, concession stands, hosting the state-wide S.C.A., and the honor roll assemblies.

The Executive Council was made up of all standing and temporary S.C.A. committees. They met to prepare the agenda for the bi-monthly S.C.A. meeting. The Executive council was divided into many branches to provide for all the needs of the school. These consisted of assemblies, dances, elections, funds and concessions, Homecoming, hospitality, student-teacher relations, and others.

A special branch of the S.C.A. was the I.C.C., led by Vice President Derek Grayer. The I.C.C. was responsible for the coordination and regulation of all school clubs and other student activities. Each club and organization was represented by its vice-president. It was at these meetings that all projects were brought up and decided upon.

THE BEST . . . Keys to Success

As an international service organization, the Key Club is affiliated with Kiwanis International. It is the largest youth organization in the United States which is school affiliated.

The school year was a very productive one for the Key Club. Some of the many projects were the Quaker Oats Save-the-Children drive, from which proceeds went to the starving in Ethiopia; the annual Christmas caroling and Christmas party; a Cystic Fibrosis fund-raiser; Special Olympics volunteers; the Miss Cox Pageant, and participants in the "Every-Child-a-Swimmer-Program," which was designed to give underprivileged children an opportunity to get accustomed to the water and to learn swimming fundamentals.

The year ended with the District Convention, an international convention where delegates representing 110,000 Key Club members met.

Officers were Mike Page, president; Stephanie Rohdenburg, vice-president; Diana Van Valkenburgh, treasurer; Rod Sandefur secretary; Gretchen Merritt, secretary.

Also participating in numerous service projects, was the National Honor Society. Its members represented the organization's four ideals: leadership, scholarship, character, and service. In order to instill these qualities throughout the student body, the Cox chapter of the National Honor Society organized and participated in several service and fund raising projects. Among these were collecting donations for the Ocean Park Volunteer Rescue Squad, volunteering to help operate the Cerebral Palsy Telethon, donating to the Joy Fund and the Virginia flood victims fund. 'Students of the month' were honored in the showcase, and free tutoring services were provided to students every quarter.

The National Honor Society's officers were proud of their club's many achievements. President Christine Smith, Vice-President Beth Von Kolnitz, Secretary Matt Hayden and Treasurer Colin Clark worked together with sponsors Mrs. Katherine Samford and Mrs. Anne Wild to create one of the most visible, most productive, and most memorable years.

DIPLOMACY

Three Divisions of Politics

For future politicians, there are several student-oriented clubs in that vein. The clubs are geared toward the political and social sciences.

Based on the real thing in New York, the Model United Nations members form committees representing different countries. The club attends conventions resembling those of the true United Nations. Is this easy? "No," commented Morel Symons, a member. "It's hard work, but it's a lot of fun. You can really get a lot out of it." The team attended conventions at Old Dominion University and the University of Virginia.

Formed just last spring, the Jefferson club is fairly new. Though new, they have accomplished much. They co-sponsored G. William Whitehurst's visit and sponsored additional speakers throughout the year to inform the members of what's what in politics.

The members of the Teen-Age Republicans club were just that; young Republicans. Members worked to support the Republican party. The majority of the clubs activities coincided with November's elections. Members worked at campaign headquarters and at the polls. The club sponsored the attendance of several Republican candidates at Homecoming.

All in all, the political clubs were quite prestigious.

CHALLENGE TO EXCELLENCE

They Met the Challenge

It's not always what you say, but how you say it. The Debate team's, Forensics team's, and the Tidewater Challenge team's victories are victories in a battle of words. All three take organization, logic, and a knack for knowing exactly what to say.

The Tidewater Challenge team "met the challenge" for the first time. The Virginia Beach schools were at last invited to participate in the academic quiz show "The Tidewater Challenge" aired on WHRO. The show resembled a high school "Jeopardy" for students who compete for scholarship money. The team made quite a showing. They committed much time and energy in preparation; however, they were defeated in their first round. Despite their loss, the twenty members accompanying the team kept rallying for them. They'll do it next year—just wait.

You definitely don't want to pick an argument with the Debate team; organized arguing is right up their alley. The debaters spent many an afternoon after school working on speed, accuracy, and organization of their cases. Obviously, the constant practice paid off. The debate team has contributed more to the school than all of her teams combined. In addition to competing, several members judged junior high debate teams.

Along the same lines, the Forensics team competes in linguistic competition. Categories range from speeches, to literary readings, to spelling. The Forensics team has won the total points trophy for the Beach again for several consecutive years. The team members had to concentrate on timing and deliverance. Eye contact and a calm and cool attitude were crucial.

While many people praise the school for various sports victories, the Falcons are formidable in terms of the more erudite competitions. The Tidewater Challenge team, the Debate team, and the Forensics team have all proven this.

Every fall the language clubs are filled to capacity with new and returning members. With the rise in foreign language enrollment, the clubs' enrollments increased as well. The Language clubs participated in an array of activities: Homecoming, community service, cultural activities relating to the individual language, and of course, fun!

The French Club won the Homecoming competition with their float representing the Statue of Liberty. They also sponsored a needy family at Thanksgiving and adopted an elementary school in Haiti through project Agape.

"I was very proud of the students' response to our Agape Project," commented Mrs. Beckner.

"It was refreshing to see."

Both clubs ate in restaurants specializing in continental cuisine. The French Club dined at Le Charlieu and the German Club ate at Das Wald Cafe. They also entered the homecoming float competition.

SALVE! ¿Como estás?

The Latin Club is the largest club in the school boasting a whopping 180 members. This past fall over 60 students traveled to Roanoke to attend a state wide Latin Convention. They brought back an astounding 43 awards. Richard Quinn, who won first place in History commented "I'm surprised I won. I guess five years of Latin has finally paid off." Their float has won second place two years in a row. This year the float depicted Julius Ceasar at the reigns of representatives from countries of the Roman Empire. This Valentines Day the sound of Latin students singing off key filled the halls with their popular "Singing Telegrams." Spring is a busy time for the club. They host a city wide Certamen contest

(it is a type of Latin game show) and won first overall last year. They also sponsor the Latin Spring Olympics in which last year they ran away with the honors. They enjoy celebrating the coming of Spring with an annual trip to Busch Gardens. The Latin Club also makes it a point to get involved with the school. This past fall they hosted the Regional field hockey match and sold programs at the State Gymnastics meet. The Latin Club is determined to keep its dynasty for years to come.

The Spanish Club has had several dinners at Pizza Hut and Chi-Chi's. They also sponsor a needy child in Mexico.

YEARBOOK

We Did . . . It For You

Dear Staff,

Now that the Talon has been put to bed, we can start going to bed at reasonable hours. No doubt about it, WE did it. We wrote about it; we edited it. We photographed, printed, and developed it. When it was ready, we cropped and captioned it. The way we pulled together and worked through each deadline was positively professional! Not bad for volunteers!

It wasn't all rosy. There were a few bleak Tuesdays and more than a couple mistakes, but we hung in there and kept at those layouts. And look what we've done! We've created an excellent publication worthy of representing the school.

The ten o'clock Fridays weren't too bad. After all, there were Kristin Rohdenburg's chocolate-chip cookies and cakes to keep us going. We had many good laughs courtesy of Paul Robertson's wise-cracks. There were the pizza dinners en masse to feed us. All of these memorable tidbits made for an interesting and a most special year. Thank you — thank you one and all.

We did it once. Let's do it again.

Love,
Mrs. Beckner

LITERATURE

What's the Scoop?

One usually thinks of hustling and bustling offices and the clickety-clack of printing presses when one thinks of a newspaper. Well, the school newspaper was not quite that hectic, but it probably came close to being so. The newspaper had to keep up with all that happened this year, report it, and show students' perspectives on the issues all at the same time. While the paper's main objective was to keep students informed, it also promoted school activities.

The newspaper was advised by Dr. Kathleen Angle and was published by Mrs. Lottie B. Vaters. Editors Jennifer Goodrich, Christi Davis, Lauri Braun, and Melissa Streeter kept things under control. Along with numerous other staffers, they produced a quality newspaper.

While the newspaper averaged one issue a quarter, the literary magazine, Wingspan, was produced at the school year's end. This work of art was just that — much work and much art. Students contributed poems, short stories, photos, and art to be considered for use in the final edition.

The sponsor, Mrs. Sue Downie worked with co-editors Pam Brien and Sally Kilada, assistant editor Lisa Kinner, and photography editor Jeff Puckett in order to put out a fine publication.

Who knows? Perhaps there could have been a few Robert Frossts or Emily Dickinsons among us.

Hard work and determination are Susan Slaven's middle names.

SCIENCE CLUB ECOLOGY CLUB

A Mutual Interest

For those students who wished to become more involved in the sciences, there were two clubs to spur their interest. The Ecology Club and the Science Club were geared towards those who wished to learn more about nature and how to preserve it.

The Ecology Club's goal was to teach students about preserving their surroundings. Club members encouraged litter control, planting trees, and other environmental projects. The club planted grass on the beach dunes, visited the Back Bay Wildlife Refuge, and traveled to NASA. They sold fire-starters to fund their field-trips.

In its first year, the Science Club had a strong foundation and membership was impressive. The club sold Cox Falcons bumper stickers, and sponsored several speakers from O.D.U. They went on a hike in Seashore State Park and sponsored a Halley's comet watch.

Both clubs gave the students a chance to explore his surroundings; they also provided an outlet for volunteer work in the community.

Ecology Club sponsor Mr. Bob Rode discusses club activities with Marian Sullivan.

The madrigals pause before filling the auditorium with beautiful music.

THAT'S ENTERTAINMENT

Encore, Encore!!!

Take Scene 1 from the top, guys! Let's start on the 3rd bar of the 4th measure. Performance is the most to these people. Thespians and Madrigals are each selective groups of the drama and music department, respectively. These people go that extra mile for their talents — they put in the extra hours and practice.

In order to be a Thespian, one has to put in a certain number of hours involved with drama productions. Thespians aided in the production of "Dark of the Moon" and presented Story Theatre in the library. They also helped with the Spring musical "Once Upon a Mattress." Thespians also performed outside of school. Six members attended the State Thespian Conference in Hayfield, Va. for three days. Several members won awards for competition in acting, singing, and technical competitions. Thespians performed "Baby" in the One-Act Play Festival; they placed second in the competition.

The Madrigals also spent much time performing and competing. The singing group performed in churches and Christmas parades. They sang the National Anthem at the State Gymnastics Competition. The general opinion of the Madrigals' performance at the teacher's reception was that the concert was "the perfect finishing touch to an excellent reception." Several members were honored by being selected as finalists and alternates for State Chorus; one member also participated in Honors Choir.

These two groups represent the Falcons Fine Arts Department. Judging from the quality of work and the numerous awards, they're doing a fine job. That's entertainment!

The pride of the Falcons is the Green Brigade.

Band members, Holly Oden, Alan Haythe, Charles Trent, Don Carlstrom and Andy Pane wear the green and gold with pride.

The leader of the Green Brigade, Mr. Steve Ambrose, takes the band to competition.

It's clear that Drum Major Eric Coleman enjoys his work.

COX BAND

Pride and Tradition

This was a successful year for the band led by Mr. Steve Ambrose and drum majors Katey Andres, Jeff Ames, and Eric Coleman who received several awards and honors.

Several students were selected to participate in Regional Band. The band as a whole received an excellent rating at the state marching band competition. The competition was fierce, but the band came out on top. Some students were acknowledged as outstanding musicians when chosen for McDonald's All American Marching Band. The Green Brigade traveled to Atlanta for four days and competed in field shows, flag events, and numerous other events.

There were several sections within the band. There was marching band led by the drum majors. A jazz band, composed of volunteers, played request performances around the beach. There was also a symphony band for more advanced musicians.

The band made an impressive showing for the school. You could say, they kept in tune with the Falcon spirit.

In a half-time skit, Colettes Kathy Allis, Rhea Rieve, Mikki Dean, Sharon Gish, and Stacey Brisbin run through a short routine.

SPIRIT!

Where to Find It

Enthusiastic, energetic, hardworking! These adjectives aptly described the Colettes. Each contributed their individuality to the team. Though each girl was unique in her own way, they worked very well together. This togetherness did not come easily just by itself, though; it takes practice and more practice.

The Colettes not only performed at football and basketball games, but they also performed at Old Dominion University soccer games and basketball halftimes. They have performed at William and Mary and participated in several parades. As fund raisers they sold spirit ribbons and mugs.

Being a Coquette requires skill, talent, time, and dedication. They're unique; they have all that and remain peppy, too.

PROFESSIONALS

Our Future

There were several vocational clubs set up to give students a chance to become more involved with their future careers. Each club was linked to the many classes preparing students for their role in the working world.

Promoting good family living, Future Homemakers of America participated in numerous city, state, and even national projects involving their club. The theme was Health and Well-Being, in both a physical and mental sense. To promote the theme, several guest speakers came to speak to students.

In a more business-like sense, the Future Business Leaders of America represented the region in a convention held at Norfolk State University. Like FHA, this club adopted grandparents from Lynn Shore Manors and participated in several other service projects.

In its first year as a new club, the Industrial Arts Club had already surpassed many other clubs in terms of membership. The club aspired to teach industry while also teaching members of leadership, responsibility and technology. As a community project, they were part of the Toys for Tots programs. For fun, the sponsored CO₂ races and set off rockets.

Last but not least, the Distributive Education Clubs of America were mainly for those students interested in marketing as a career. The club encouraged business training by cooperating and working with local businesses.

All of these clubs provided both a creative outlet and a means of further vocational education.

SERVICE

Well-Spent Time

There were numerous service clubs that allowed students to be of help to others. All performed special and important tasks while they gave students a chance to interact with each other.

The Cox Medical Association provided students with the opportunity to learn about the medical profession. "It will help us with learning about aiding others," said Karen Howard, an active member. The club sponsored two speakers a week, assisted in the blood drive, and frequently visited hospitals.

The Video Club aspired to inform students and the public of what was happening in the school. They did so by producing a program called "The Falcon Focus." The club also took part in producing the city wide program "On Location," aired on cable channel 29. While being responsible and professional the Video Club also has fun. "Sure it's work, but it's worth it," said Cathy Coeki.

The Library Club worked to promote the library and reading in general. The club sponsored the book drive in January and assisted the unfortunate victims of the floods.

These three clubs, while allowing students to help themselves, were also a help to the school and the community. The time taken for these extracurricular activities was well spent.

HELPERS

They Do It All

Back and forth, back and forth! You saw them zipping through the halls, running this errand for that certain someone. The helpers helped both students and administration. All of the helpers were volunteers and were greatly needed.

Clinic aides assisted Mrs. McBride, R.N. by filing and other office duties. They also helped with medicinal tasks, such as assisting injured students with the elevator and fetching books of those students who are ill.

"They're a tremendous help," said Mrs. McBride.

Office and Guidance helpers performed some of the same tasks as the Clinic workers. They acted more as messengers. They gathered attendance cards and delivered lunches that were left at home.

The Library helpers assisted with library duties such as stamping passes and working at the desk. They took time to reorganize the many books in the library and helped keep the library in order.

The Audio-Visual helpers delivered media equipment to various classes and assisted sometimes-confused teachers in setting up the equipment. These students also did many teachers a favor by recording certain television programs.

All the helpers were essential to teachers, students and administration. These volunteers were part of the structure of the school.

A Clean Sweep

Custodial and Cafeteria Staffs

While most of us spend the afternoon and evening hours away from (the halls of) school, a dedicated number of custodians worked to pick up what we left behind and make our environment neat and clean for the next day. If it were not for the custodians, within two days the students would probably be knee deep in garbage. Early in the morning, the cafeteria staff was busy preparing enough food for over two thousand students, which was no small task. They even managed a friendly smile when we came through the line in droves. They worked behind the scenes, but their value was obvious. We just wanted to say thanks.

It's no use! You can't hide, ladies. Phylis Grumble, Glosten Winfield, Margeret Palmer, try to escape the camera.

... WITH MONEY IN OUR POCKETS

Endless shopping opportunities are available to students in the Cox area. Pictures and pets, cars and karate, food and fashion are all within reach . . . as long as the price is right. If you need a pick-me-up, buy something, try something on, or try out a new place. It's all there for the buying!

COLOPHON

The 1986 Talon, volume 25 was published by Hunter Publishing company, Winston-Salem, North Carolina. Mr. John Perry was the publishing representative. The press run was 1,200 copies. The finish of the paper throughout the book is gloss. The cover is black laminated, lithographed with 20% grey lettering and contrasting red lettering. The majority of the type used in the book is Times Roman. The body copy is in 10-point type, the captions and the kickers are in 8-point type. All opening and closing body copy is in 18-point type.

Most senior portraits, faculty and underclass pictures, group pictures and assorted candids were taken by Mr. Hal Ward of Max Ward-Delmar Studios, Chesapeake, Virginia.

The staff of life for the staff of Talon.

FROM THE EDITOR . . .

Special thanks to the following: Mrs. Briget Hampson, Mrs. Ingrid Dickens and Ms. Pat Robertson for always lending us their keys to the yearbook room; Mr. Leon Hoots and Dr. Kathleen Angle for their help with photography; Mrs. Mary Malone for her long-distance support; Mr. Hal Ward of Max Ward Delmar Studios for his reliable help; Miss Kristin Rohdenburg for all of the goodies she baked for our deadlines; Mr. Lee Clark for his undying support; and especially Mrs. Lottie B. Waters for coming up with the theme "We Did It."

I would like to give my personal thanks to the staff; you did a great job! Also, to my assistant editors, Sarah Hess and Susan McClellan for all of their hard work and support. Most of all, my sincere thanks to Mrs. Margaret Beckner. I could never have done it without you, and it wouldn't have been nearly as much fun.

Thanks,
Stephanie

... WITH A BACKWARDS GLANCE

In many respects, this year was a typical school year. We took our share of tests and agonized over the grades. We went to class, sometimes late, sometimes unprepared. We stuffed our lockers, lined up for lunch, wrote with number two pencils, and served an occasional detention. Yes, there was a lot of the routine called school. But, this was also a special year. We collected money for the United Way, raffled a car for our new marquee, and blew the roof off at Homecoming. We stepped into the shoes of our predecessors and took our own steps with them. We brought home trophies, titles and championships for the district, region, and state. We took up the colors of green and gold, and we wore them proudly. We did it! We did it well.

Looking for some help from a passerby, Brooke Donahue tries to pack his locker.

Cox's new marquee — one more example of Falcon pride.

At lunch, Sean Sawyer glances around to see if anyone saw what a big bite he took.

In the library, Missy Tourgee, Sarah Wright, and Andrew Rhoades glance upwards to look at the new banners.

... WITH FORWARD VISION

It's true that this year was a starting point. It was a beginning of new traditions, and we saw a burst of new enthusiasm. The senior left a legacy of dedication and determination to excel. Some of us were fledgling Falcons at the start of the year, but we grew as the year progressed, and with us grew those new seeds of spirit that we all helped to plant. We have a tough act to follow, and it won't always be easy, but just as those before us did it, we'll do it too.
